Sending Broadband over power lines sounds risky at best... risky towards creating interferences with other uses of the frequencies that would operate such systems. We need to protect such frequencies as there are only so many available and we cannot create more.

Furthermore, such uses would have the possiblity of literally travelling around the world, potentially creating havoc in many unintended places.